Hobbies and Food

Texas is great for both

So this is all about hobbies, so that is probably just going to be video games for a while. Women are off the menu for at least now. I also enjoy spending money but as I really don't have that one. Video games it is! So I guess I did spend some cash when I first got here. There were some amazing black friday cyber monday week long deals that I fully took advantage of. Also I'm paying a dollar for two weeks of Cosole game pass ultimate. So thats pretty sweet.

At the end of that, I should have enough microsoft points to get another month.... and then another. If I don't have to pay for it thats amazing! Though the games seem to be lacking some sort of sparkle. I purchased Dark Souls Trilogy and it's kicking my ass and I'm loving it. Dishonored, Outter Planets, Monster hunter... I thought I would love all of it. Don't. Boarderlands 3 is pretty kick ass. So here is a whole lot of text. Nothing to it. No pictures, italics, graphs or anything. Page of words.

Dollars and Satoshi

I think these are going to be very important as things are not going so well in other departments. I will write a tell all book, using this software, but it will not be so easily found on something like github! Not that you guys are not amazing people... It's just in real life there are real life drama and well it's a place for reddit and 4chan. Dirty place.

Living and Texas

#This is not California

That being said, they are as prepared as California was. Blind sided by a system that does not mean to function. The law talks about intention, spirit, not always the letter. In my case, the spirit is not designed to be lawful, willing to help, or functional. I am currently in a stable invirament that is actually made of limbo. I know what the dear reader must be thinking. How is that stable? It's complicated but it is so, by comparison. Everything is relative.

Being around people I can trust is so helpful. I don't think someone is going to be breaking in, not anytime soon. I'm not wondering who is going to move in next week. No one at least not anyone besides me has been seen talking to themselves. Well to be honest, the talker, was most assurdly the most tame person there.

Chapter 4: Civil and Criminal

Okay so off the bat, I don't think of myself as a criminal. I don't think of myself as an alcoholic. The people who know me best, would tend to agree although I have in the past been known to drink them under the table. When I think of those terms I flinch. I have been on more than one occasion been court mandated to do substance abuse. So it must be I have some sort of problem!

The first time I was a teenager in highschool. I was pulled over and given a ticket for driving without my license. The passenger was drunk and had an open container. It was also his car. So because I the minor was sober, and driving, I was responsible for everything. The drunk adult did not get a ticket or anything and my mom was called to come pick me up. The result was I could not get my license for a while (nothing to suspend). Also a substance abuse program called Action where I got my 60 or 90 day chip (can't remember how long the thing was) and that was the first time I was considered an outlier.

I am also not a criminal as I mentioned above. Although I do have a CDCR number, a parole agent in Texas, and other legal issues. Again nothing is straight forward and nothing I can really do about it. It is just a state of being. I have technically been on parole for almost 9 years now. Even that is not straight forward because my release date was just a few months ago. That is where the civil comes into play. I was in the position to only spend 44 days in prison, but had the whatever it took to get sent to a mental hospital almost for the sole purpose of saying I did not do a crime. Oh you didn't do crazy criminal things? I don't believe you! Off with your head! Yeah, that's what the trained PhD psycho bobble head dude said to me. After some time, his report changed to, well it's not clear what he did or didn't do, so he is okay in my book!
